Recommendations

Universal access to health and social care and services must be ensured for all migrants/refugees (including undocumented migrants, such as visa or permit ‘over stayers’, rejected asylum seekers and individuals who have entered a country without documentation). Below are our recommendations:

-  Engage communities and emphasize community action, engage multidisciplinary teams of experts
-  Community health care services for migrants/refugees need to address issues related to continuity of information, language, culture and communication and health literacy. This will make services more inclusive and responsive to the multiple sociocultural needs of migrants/refugees
-  Health care delivery should also incorporate routine disease management activities addressing specific health concerns and health issues for migrants/refugees in addition to the emergency care entitlement. Such services are best effective at the primary health care and community levels
-  Address health promotion and disease prevention and implement relevant interventions at the community level
-  Understand local community perceptions about migrants/refugees, identify misconceptions, design strategies to manage and overcome differences through appropriate action
-  Offer health professionals easy access to language appropriate material and tools relevant to migrant and refugee health
